CONTENTS.

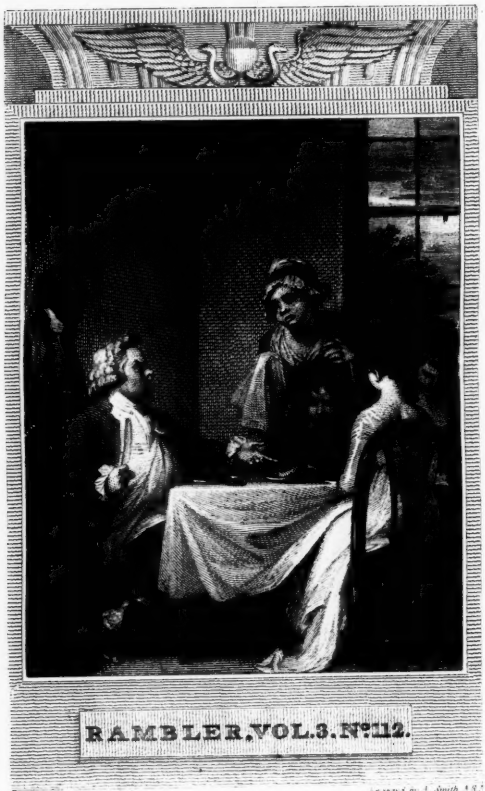
No.		Page
112.	Too much nicety not to be indulged. The character of Eriphile	1
113.	The history of Hymenæus's courtship	7
114.	The necessity of proportioning punishments to crimes	13
115.	The sequel of Hymenæus's courtship	19
116.	The young trader's attempt at politeness	25
117.	The advantages of living in a garret	31
118.	The narrowness of fame	38
119.	Tranquilla's account of her lovers opposed to Hymenæus	43
120.	The history of Almamoulin the son of Nouradin	49
121.	The dangers of imitation. The impropriety of imitating Spenser	55
122.	A criticism on the English historians	61
123.	The young trader turned gentleman	66
124.	The lady's misery in a summer retirement	71
125.	The difficulty of defining comedy. Tragic and comic sentiments confounded	76
126.	The universality of cowardice. The impropriety of extorting praise. The impertinence of an astronomer	82
127.	Diligence too soon relaxed. Necessity of perseverance	88
128.	Anxiety universal. The unhappiness of a wit and a fine lady	92
129.	The folly of cowardice and inactivity	98
130.	The history of a beauty	103
131.	Desire of gain the general passion	109
132.	The difficulty of educating a young nobleman	114
133.	The miseries of a beauty defaced	119
134.	Idleness an anxious and miserable state	124
135.	The folly of annual retreats into the country	129
136.	The meanness and mischiefs of indiscriminate dedication	134
137.	The necessity of literary courage	140

ADLEN
OCT 30

451433

CONTENTS.

No.		Page
138.	Original characters to be found in the country. The character of Mrs. Busy	145
139.	A critical examination of Samson Agonistes	150
140.	The criticism continued	157
141.	The danger of attempting wit in conversation. The character of Papilius	164
142.	An account of Squire Bluster	169
143.	The criterions of plagiarism	175
144.	The difficulty of raising reputation. The various species of detractors	182
145.	Petty writers not to be despised	187
146.	An account of an author travelling in quest of his own character. The uncertainty of fame	192
147.	The courtier's esteem of assurance	197
148.	The cruelty of parental tyranny	202
149.	Benefits not always entitled to gratitude	207
150.	Adversity useful to the acquisition of knowledge	213
151.	The climacterics of the mind	218
152.	Criticism on epistolary writings	223
153.	The treatment incurred by loss of fortune	228
154.	The inefficacy of genius without learning	235
155.	The usefulness of advice. The danger of habits. The necessity of reviewing life	240
156.	The laws of writing not always indisputable. Reflections on tragi-comedy	246
157.	The scholar's complaint of his own bashfulness	251
158.	Rules of writing drawn from examples. Those examples often mistaken	256
159.	The nature and remedies of bashfulness	261



RAMBLER, VOL. 3. N°112.

Painted by Robt Smirke R.A. Engraved by A. Smith A.R.A.

Published by T. Cadell, London
March 31st 1809